A Note from the Director

Good evening everyone, and welcome to Seton's Greetings. This year, our concert is taking place in a way I never could have imagined: 100% virtually. Normally, we would be bringing this concert to you in December, with an auditorium full of people. Instead, Mr. Gianoutsos spent time helping us record things before Christmas break, and then edited together the video that you are going to see today. The pandemic has forced us all to be creative, and more importantly, to appreciate the opportunities we have in front of us, regardless of how new or different they may be for everyone. The main goal that we had this year was to perform together, and, through that, hopefully bring some joy to everyone this Christmas season. I am thankful that we were able to remain in-person to continue safely creating music together. The students took the necessary safety changes in stride, and I am very appreciative of that. Mrs. Martin, and Mr. Merchant, and Mrs. Osterhaus were incredibly supportive of providing us the necessary accommodations to continue rehearsing safely.

Not everyone was able to attend the recording session due to quarantining or other health-related concerns. I want to make sure, however, that the equal contributions of each member are noted. I appreciate the flexibility of everyone in making the necessary changes to learn a new part, or being able to cover something last minute due to other members having to quarantine. I am especially grateful for Sean ('19) and George Maxwell giving so graciously of their time, and stepping in when we were down a drum set player or pianist.

I have said this to each group multiple times: I am glad we are able to bring all of you this concert, but I am hopeful that we never have to coordinate a concert like this again. I am hopeful that by the time Spring comes around, we are able to have people back in our auditorium to safely watch a live concert, even if we are still masked and socially distanced. Until we are all able to be together again, stay well.

Sincerely,

Mr. Guzik
